Creating and Maintaining a Strong Brand Identity

The All in Campaign Brand Standards Guide reviews the various elements and tools comprising the graphic foundation of the campaign brand.

The visual identity standards apply to all uses of the campaign brand and all Western communications, including signage, email, advertising, social media, websites, stationary, presentations, web and brochures.

This guide explains the correct usage of the All in Campaign logo, tagline, design use and appropriate use in copy that are the basis of the campaign communications system. It is designed to complement and respect all existing Western Brand Standards.

Both the Campaign Brand Standards and the Western Brand Standards must be followed closely in all Western communications to ensure consistency.

We encourage you to use the All in Campaign logos, templates and tools wherever appropriate for your unit, faculty or department. Please ensure the campaign brand standards are respected at all times and when linking directly from campaign assets (such as the logo), please point to campaignrelated content on the microsite: allin.westernu.ca

This launch is just the beginning. As the All in Campaign brand continues to roll out, new details and assets will be added and refined check back often for updates.

Guiding Principles

- 1. The All in Campaign Brand Standards and the Western Brand Standards are both mandatory—all standards must be applied universally with only noted exceptions.
- 2. Western does not expect staff to be "design experts." Appropriate templates/examples have been developed and are available.
- 3. If in doubt, review outgoing items with Western Communications.

Appropriate use of the tagline in copy

Do:

Wherever possible, use the approved logo (All in.) and always follow brand standards. For formal references to the official campaign name, where the noun 'campaign' will appear alongside the tagline, write All in Campaign (italicize All in, capital A, lowercase i, no period). If using the phrase "all in" within a sentence (to refer to the concept of being fully committed and/or together), follow normal grammar and punctuation rules, and wherever possible underline all in for emphasis (using a blue line that follows campaign brand colours).

Don't:

Modify the logo or create any new versions. Refrain from using "ALL IN" or "All In" in body copy. Don't put "All in Campaign" or "All in" in quotes. Only include a period in copy if it naturally falls at the end of the sentence.

See examples on page 11

Exception:

If italics are not possible (e.g., where Western's CMS, Cascade, doesn't allow italics to be used) and you are making a formal reference to the official campaign name, "All in" Campaign may be used (quotes on "All in", capital A, lowercase I, no period).
